Class attendance and missed quizzes and tests

Language study is sequential, and is based on regular classroom interaction. Therefore, regular attendance is essential in order to complete the course satisfactorily. Your attendance, homework submission and in-class performance will be monitored, reported and discussed at the course meeting regularly. If you are absent through illness or other difficulties, you should notify the course coordinator and consult your teachers about work missed as soon as possible.

If a student misses a quiz/test due to illness or other exceptional circumstances, the course coordinator must be informed by no later than 5.00 p.m. of the day in which that quiz/test was scheduled. Late sitting will only be granted when legitimate reasons exist. Requests for early sitting cannot be granted.

Unsatisfactory performance

Please note that if the MSc course director judges that a student's rate of progress is not satisfactory and he/she is very likely to fail the examination, that student may be asked to discontinue the course.
