Mexico’s Second Transition?

Joint Conference Nuffield College & Latin American Centre, University of Oxford

Nuffield College, University of Oxford

3rd and 4th of October 2018

Wednesday, 3rd October

09:00 Introduction
Carlos A. Pérez Ricart (St. Antony’s College)
Laurence Whitehead (Nuffield College)

09:30-11:10 Panel 1: Mexico’s democratic challenges: elections, government and society
Arturo Sánchez (TEC Monterrey) Challenges to Mexican democracy after the 2018 election
Kevin Middlebrook (UCL) A new era in state-labour relations?
Chair: Laurence Whitehead (Nuffield College)

11:10-11:30 Break

11:30-13:00 Panel 2: The new government’s (likely) take on human rights, drugs and security
Mónica Serrano (COLMEX) Ending Mexico’s war on drugs? AMLO’s new security approach
Patricio R. Estévez-Soto (UCL) Old wine, new bottles: AMLO’s security strategy
Chair: Dudley Ankerson (Latin Insight Consulting)

13:00-14:00 Lunch

14:00-15:40 Panel 3: Energy policy: reformist setback?
Dudley Ankerson (Latin Insight Consulting) AMLO's Energy Policy - Make PEMEX Great Again?
José María Valenzuela (St. Antony's College) Low-carbon transition in the energy sector: climate policy from the left?
Chair: David R. Mares (UC San Diego)

15:40-16:20 Break

16:20-18:00 Panel 4: Foreign Policy
Laurence Whitehead (Nuffield College) Trump and the NAFTA question
Maryhen Jiménez (St Cross College) AMLO and Venezuela - comparable realities or distorted accounts?
Chair: Giles Paxman (former Ambassador to Mexico 2005-2009)

18:00-18:30 Conclusions
Alan Knight (St Antony's College)

19:00 Drinks reception, Senior Common Room, Nuffield College
19:30 Dinner at Nuffield College

Thursday 4th October 2018

09:30-10:30 Mexico's Economic perspectives
Rodrigo Aguilar Bad intentions and bad outcomes: does the Mexican economic model have a future?

10:30-12:10 Panel 5: Federalism, local and subnational politics
Marianne Braig (FU Berlin) The reconfiguration of clientelist state-society-relations in México City
Javier Pérez Sandoval (Wolfson College) Navigating subnational tides amidst the tsunami: Exploring state-level political dynamics after the 2018 Mexican elections
Alejandro Espinosa Herrera (Nuffield College) Fiscal Federalism, Party Politics and Amlo's re-centralization effort.
Chair: Carlos A. Pérez Ricart (St. Antony's College)

12:10-12:30 Break

12:30-13:00 Conclusions
Laurence Whitehead (Nuffield College)

13:00 Lunch
PANELISTS

Rodrigo Aguilera
Rodrigo Aguilera is a London-based economist who has worked as an international economist for Chatham House and the Economist Intelligence Unit, where he was the lead analyst for Mexico from 2012 to 2017. Rodrigo holds a BSc in Economics from Universidad de las Americas (Puebla) and an MSc in Social Policy and Development from LSE.

Dudley Ankerson
Dudley Ankerson is a political consultant specialising in Latin America and particularly in Mexico. He spent twenty-five years in Her Majesty's Diplomatic Service, serving amongst other posts in Argentina, Mexico and Spain. He wrote a biography of Saturnino Cedillo, a prominent figure in the Mexican Revolution, and published several articles on Mexican history.

Marianne Braig
Marianne Braig is Professor of Political Science at the Institute for Latin American Studies at Freie Universität Berlin. Marianne's broad research encompasses the following topics: gender segmentation in labour markets, and social and educational policy, transformation and development in Latin America, the political culture of the state and governance, as well as intertwined and interdependent inequalities in the global context.

Alejandro Espinosa Herrera
Alejandro Espinosa is a DPhil candidate in Political Science at the University of Oxford and a member of Nuffield College. His research interests include public budgeting, party politics, fiscal federalism, decentralisation, and Latin American politics. He holds a M.Sc. in Latin American Studies (honours) and a M.Sc. in Politics, both from the University of Oxford, as well as a BA in Economics from Tecnológico de Monterrey.

Patricio R. Estévez-Soto
Patricio R. Estévez-Soto is currently pursuing a PhD in Security and Crime Science at UCL. His research is focused on the situational prevention of organized crimes, with particular attention to extortion against businesses in Mexico. He holds a BA in Communication Science, an MRes in Security Science, and a Master in Public Policy. Before joining University College London, Patricio worked in Mexico's Ministry of the Interior, where he was part of a government-led effort to promote scientific research on security.

Maryhen Jiménez Morales
Maryhen Jiménez is a DPhil candidate at St Cross College, Oxford University. Her research interests include electoral authoritarianism, democratic transition, and political parties in Latin America. Her doctoral thesis explores uneven patterns of opposition coordination in autocracies using empirical evidence from Latin America. The questions addressed in her research include: Why do some opposition parties coordinate in electoral autocracies, while others do not? How does repression affect the likelihood of opposition coordination?

Alan Knight
Alan Knight was Professor of the History of Latin America and Fellow of St Antony's College at the University of Oxford. His chief interest is twentieth-century Latin American history, with a focus on Mexico, agrarian society, state-building and revolutions.

Davis R. Mares
David R. Mares, Ph.D., is a nonresident scholar in Latin American energy studies at Rice University’s Baker Institute for Public Policy. He is also Professor of Political Science and Adjunct Professor at the Graduate School of International Relations and Pacific Studies at the University of California, San Diego.
Kevin Middlebrook

Kevin J. Middlebrook is Professor of Latin American Politics at the Institute of the Americas, University College London. He was previously affiliated with the Institute of Latin American Studies (2002-04) and the Institute for the Study of the Americas (2004-12), both at the University of London. Between 1995 and 2001 he was Director of the Center for U.S.-Mexican Studies at the University of California, San Diego, where he also held an appointment as Adjunct Professor of Political Science.

Giles Paxman

Giles Paxman is a British diplomat who was Ambassador to Mexico 2005–09, and then Ambassador to Spain 2009–13. He worked in public service for 39 years, holding posts in Brussels, Rome, Paris and Singapore among others.

Carlos A. Pérez Ricart

Carlos A. Pérez Ricart is Postdoctoral Fellow in the Contemporary History and Public Policy of Mexico at the University of Oxford, as well as a member of the History Faculty and the Latin American Centre (LAC), and St Antony’s College. His research interests include the relationship between Mexico and the U.S., security and organised crime, militarisation, state violence, and state formation.

Javier Pérez Sandoval

Javier is a DPhil in Politics candidate based at Wolfson College. He teaches Latin American Politics to undergrads at the University of Oxford and has worked as an Associate Lecturer at Oxford Brookes University for the same course. He is interested in regime change and subnational politics.

Arturo Sánchez

Arturo Sánchez works as a Research-Professor at the Escuela de Gobierno y Transformación Política, Tecnológico de Monterrey. He was part of the Mexican Electoral Board between 2003 and 2010 (IFE), as well as between 2014-2017 (INE). He holds a BA in sociology from the Universidad Autónoma Metropolitana and a Master in Latin American Studies from the University of Oxford.

Mónica Serrano

Mónica Serrano is Research-Professor of International Relations at El Colegio de México, Senior Fellow at the Ralph Bunche Institute, and Senior Research Associate at the Centre for International Studies, Oxford University. Her main research topics are international security, civil-military relations, transnational crime and human rights.

José María Valenzuela

José María Valenzuela is a doctoral student in public policy at the University of Oxford. His published work concerns the multiple dimension of transforming the energy sector with an emphasis on the role of innovative forms of governance, regulation and property. Previously, he worked for Mexico’s Department of Energy on climate change and renewable energy policy.

Laurence Whitehead

Laurence Whitehead is a Senior Research Fellow in Politics at Nuffield College, Oxford University, where he served as Acting Warden 2005/6. In 2011/2 he served as Senior Proctor of the University. His main research focus lies on authoritarianism and democracy in Latin America.

For enquiries regarding the conference please contact Dr Carlos A. Pérez Ricart

Carlos.perezricart@sant.ox.ac.uk